OUR SALEM LETTER.

SALEM, Jan. 27, 1873.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

Bright green blades of grass springing up along sidewalks and in the parks remind those whose daily life does not take them beyond the vista of streets and brick and wooden walls, that the time approaches when all nature will throb with the fullness of spring. I do not mean to say but there are other indications in the natural world which lead to the same thought as the winter wanes. But it strikes me that is a decent observation taken alone, and stands for all it means. A cloud of blackbirds alighted in the street, at the Opera House corner, yesterday morning, knowing doubtless it was Sunday, and everybody in a pacific mood. Another harbinger.

ALL ABOUT CROW.

Hollanders revere the stork, for its police services on their dykes, the peasants of Siberia worship the dove for its harmless qualities, and the excellent duty it did for Noah as a courier, and the climatic indolence of the tropics pays reverence to the buzzard as an industrious scavenger; but Salem has a monopoly in its respect for another bird—the crow. The crow is certainly a peculiar institution for a city, but nearly all winter we have and them with us. They flap their sombre wings about streets and dooryards, sit quietly on fences and give you that sly wink of assurance, in passing, which the thing of evil "perched on the pallid bust of Pallas," just above Poe's chamber door, should have given him when he should have more naturally thrown his boot jack at it than rhythmic invective. And yet I have never seen them disturbed. Even the boys pass them by without harrassment. They are not pretty, nor useful, nor obscerful, and, unlike the others, they are not themes for the painter's brush or poet's song. A Western poet, in some lines on the burning of Chicago, comes the nearest to bringing this bird into notice of any body; one of his verses beginns thus:

"Caw! caw!" the chorus shrieked, "the end of all this come. Unharmed the crow shall build its nest In crannies open to the screaming West," etc

If this be prophetic, let Salemites "look to their hearths."

SUNDAY IN SALEM.

Philosophers say the best tests of a people's civilization and enlightenment are their morals. Sunday is a good day to examine into the status of a community in that respect. Quiet enough at all times, Salem on Sabbath days has a refreshing air of rest and decorum. If it is a fine day, the impressions upon the feelings are pleasant in the extreme. Outwardly there are no signs of business, and when the short morning hours are past, pealing church bells summon crowds of well dressed, happy looking people to religious services. The different sects are well appreciated and each have a comparatively good attendance. In almost every quarter of the town during the hours of worship you can hear the song of praise and the prayer of thanksgiving. In the afternoon throngs of young persons attend Sabbath school, and after the lessons of the day, stroll away in companies and couples through the streets, and out on the suburban walks. Besides the church goers, there are those who find rest and recreation in different ways. Such crowd the railway platform when the trains come and go, find something to look at and admire down by the riverside, or hang dreamily over the rails of foot bridges, inhaling the fragrance of pipe or cigar. Altogether it is pleasing to experience a fine Sabbath in Salem. Listening one evening recently to the chimes of the bells, the number of which is something marvelous for a city of this size, as I walked with a friend, who is something of a cynic, I was about to quote Moore's melody:

"Sweet evening bells, sweet evening bells, How many a tale their music tells"

when he interrupted me with the very prosaic query: "If every gin-mill in town had a bell and when business was dull, they should ring them, how would it sound?" I gave it up.

A VIEW OF THE STATE PRISON.

A party of several, among whom was your correspondent, made a visit to the Penitentiary the other day. It was Sunday, and as the inmates were engaged in religious service when we applied for admittance, rather than disturb them by any gratification of curiosity, we took a stroll through the enclosure until worship was concluded. The guard at the gateway of the grounds obligingly hoisted the gate and we passed in.

The prison of Superintendent Berry's time is not used at all, the cells having been removed and everything about it left to decay.

The tannery, containing sixteen vats, is incomplete, but when finished will add greatly to the resources of the prison. The machine and saddle tree shops are turning out a good deal of work, having fine machinery propelled by a 14 horse power engine.

Away down across the field in one corner of the enclosure is the grave yard, with two or three headboards only. "They don't stay there long," said one of our party who knows, "the doctors get the remains, and as a general thing put the bones upon stilts." This I believe, is the case where no relatives ask for the body.

Services having concluded the inmates were allowed a short time for recreation in the yard. They walked and talked but were not boisterous or loud. Quite a number wore the Gardiner shackle; only these, however, whom the Superintendent is required by the obduracy of the prisoner or some outside cause to keep them on. Their appearance as a whole was such as a person would expect to see in such a place, the looks of some exciting sympathy and others looking as if you wouldn't wish to meet them anywhere else.

We made the rounds of the cells after the prisoners had dinner; said dinner being a good and sufficient dish of stewed beef and bread.

In their cells we saw Tompkins and Bramlette the mail robbers. Tompkins still speaks of his unjust condemnation and thinks he will come out all right yet.

The cells of the prison are primitive enough as a general thing for comfort as regards furniture, but in several instances I noticed the "trustie" had improved by adding pictures, etc., and one, McIntyre's, was papered and carpeted, besides sundry pictures and a small mirror. One of us said to him that he thought there were persons outside who were less comfortably fixed. "Yes," he replied, "but if these gates and walls were gold and the light was as bright as the sun it would be no object compared with being free." Such is liberty. In nearly every cell were books and those who were not reading were smoking or otherwise killing time.

The library contains over three hundred volumes, and I noticed that such books as the "River of the West," bore marks of most frequent use, although the collection embraces works on a wide range of subjects.

Out of the 101 prisoners there are only two in the hospital, both suffering from bronchitis.

A turnkey shut our party in one of the dungeons, kept solely for punishment. The gloom was sickening for the moment we were in there. These dungeons are without anything but walls floor and ceiling, and such is the terror they inspire that their use is seldom necessary.

In closing this hasty sketch I would bear testimony to the gentlemanly conduct of those in charge of the prison toward visitors, and add that what Bill Watkinds don't know about keeping a penitentiary aint worth knowing.

EVERYTHING ELSE.

Work has been re commenced on the new court house, and plasterers are at work on Cooke's new residence. Other new buildings show no signs of work resumed.

Supreme Court sessions still hold on. Mr. Curl, Clerk, is confined to his residence with rheumatism.

Sufficient river business is doing to furnish an item now and then for the local papers.

The revival at the M. E Church closed last Sunday night. Over one hundred have been added to its membership.

The printers of Salem claim the honor of being the first of the craft on the Pacific Coast to move in the matter of the erection of a monument to the late Hon. Horace Greeley.

It is proposed to bring water from Mill creek near by the penitentiary grounds, at Salem for running machinery.

FROM THE NATIONAL CAPITOL.

FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14, 1873.

RIVER IMPROVEMENTS IN OREGON.

A matter of much interest to us is found in the Secretary of War's report to Congress, being the report to him of Major Robert in relation to the improvements in the rivers of Oregon. It recites the operations on the Swan Island bar. In a little over one month's work the dredger last spring excavated 23 933 cubic yards, of which 19 118 cubic yards were permanent bed of the river—clay and gravel—the rest was a recent deposit in the channel that had to cleaned up. He recites that last winter's flood left a very large deposit in the river bed there which he attributes to the extensive grading lately done by the railroad company and the authorities of Portland, and the high winter freshet. The bar was found to be one foot higher than before the cut was made. The intended operations for the present year are the repair of the old dredger loaned by the city, the building of a new dredger, two dumping scows, and the excavation of 25,000 cubic yards at Swan Island bar, which has doubtless been going on since the date of the report, August 26. The cut was then 2,250 long, and there remained 1,150 feet more to cut.

BAR AT MOUTH OF WALLAMET.

At this point 3 325 cubic yards were removed from a line 100 feet long; 40 trees and stumps were removed from the channel. According to this report extensive improvements are required all along the river in that vicinity to make a good 17-foot channel. The expenditures were inside the fund on hand, amounting to $17,710 51, and leaving balance on hand of $3,854 80, and to be added to this was the sum of $50,000 appropriated for the current year. Major Robert prudently and with great judgment recommends that the appropriation for 1873 74 be so made that the work can be done on the Lower Columbia river as well as the Lower Wallamet, and specified, "for improvement of the Wallamet and Columbia rivers from Portland to the sea." He explains that some of the worst difficulties to navigation are to be found on the Columbia, and that no provision has been made for their removal.

THE UPPER WALLAMET.

It seems the work on the Upper Wallamet has not proceeded very vigorously for the reason that the P. T. Company "having sold out to the same parties who owned the railroad running parallel with the river," the latter were not so immediately interested in improving navigation as their predecessor the P. T. Company. The Wallamet Transportation Company might not anxious to contract to clear the river obstructions away, and there was no other party able to do the work. Considerable was accomplished, however. A snag boat was built and operated with the aid of a steamer hired of the P. T. Company for awhile, which used a scraper to advantage. Mathony's Bar was much improved by the scraper and a contract was let to Joseph Paquet to build wing dams during the fall.

The building of the canal and locks was alluded to and the importance of the work described. There remained available July 1st, $8,253 61 and a further appropriation of $9,000 is asked for 1873-4, and the building of wing dams, scraping of bars and clearing away of snags are all that he believes will be justifiable thereafter.

WORK ON THE UMPQUA RIVER.

Of the $22,511, available for the improvement of the Umpqua river, Major Robert had expended $17,925 11 only, and he recommends that further work of improvement wait until the value of what has been done can be tested by time. He intimates distinctly in the close of that paragraph that time will confirm his opinion that no improvement of the Umpqua should have been attempted. A balance of $4,585 89 is turned into the treasury and no further appropriation recommended.

ST. HELENS' BAR.

This bar has been surveyed at a cost of $180 38 and his estimate calls for an appropriation of $3,000 to remove the objections existing there. He proposes that a general appropriation be made, as before alluded to, considering all the waters below Portland as one river to be improved from a common fund.

THE UPPER COLUMBIA.

Major Robert gives the result of personal observations made on the Upper Columbia at the request of Capt. J. C. Ainsworth. He recommends the removal of "John Day's Rock" in the mid dle of John Day Rapids and of a number of rocks at "Devil's Bend," while the most extensive work is needed at the Umatilla Rapids. For these improvements he recommends an appropriation of $40,000, while he states that the channel would only be cleared by this so as to effect the removal of the worst obstructions.

Major Robert has undoubtedly done his work well and economically, and it is a fortunate thing that the Government is represented by so zealous and efficient an officer, who saves all that he can of the appropriations, and that Oregon has the benefit of services that are so duly and industriously rendered.

OTHER OREGON BUSINESS.

Senator Corbett this morning introduced the petitions of 150 leading merchants of Portland asking for the improvement of the navigation of the Yamhill river. No survey has yet been made of the obstructions to navigation there, but he hopes to secure an appropriation without it, as it can be made contingent upon the judgment of Major Robert after he shall have procured a survey. He will at least secure that a survey shall be ordered that can serve as a basis for future appropriations. He lately introduced a bill to provide that Land offices of the United States shall be allowed rent, which has not heretofore been the case.

A bill was introduced by him this morning or yesterday, donating the buildings and grounds of the Dalles Mint and material on hand there to the State of Oregon. During the late session of the Legislature an act passed appropriating this Mint building to the Dalles or to Wasco county, for school purposes, &c., in case the title of the United States is conveyed to the State, as now asked for.

The bill lately introduced by Senator Corbett providing that National Banks be authorized to loan their surplus profits in the same proportion as their capital stock, was this morning reported on favorably and passed the Senate.

The Committee on Public Lands, of the House, has appointed Thursday morning to hear the statements of various parties concerning the proposed Portland, Dalles and Salt Lake railroad. There will be a strong effort on the part of the friends of the measure to make a good impression. Hon. J. G. Wilson, our Congressman elect, has located himself here for the remainder of the winter, and can be very useful, as he determines to be, in working for the interests of Oregon. The time is short—only seven weeks remains after now—but no effort will be spared to do all that can be done.

EXCITING CAUSES.

Credit Mobilier continues to be a topic of general interest, and a few Congressmen are a trifle out of luck. A number of prominent gentlemen backed out early enough in the game to save their bacon. The investigation weakens as it proceeds, and the charge that Congressional legislation was improperly influenced is far from being well sustained.

The Louisiana case is up for action, and if it is well attended to, Congress won't have time for much else. It is to be hoped that Louisiana, Alabama and Arkansas can make some shift to settle their own affairs honestly at home.

THE AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE BILL.

The Senate had yesterday under consideration Morrill's bill to give each State the proceeds of 500,000 acres of public lands for the establishment and support of Agricultural Colleges. A long debate arose thereon, in the course of which the Senators from the most populous States, some of them, urged that the division should be made in proportion to population of each State. A long argument followed, but I consider the inclination of the Senate manifestly favors the bill as it is. The debate continued into and an Executive session followed it without coming to a vote on the measure, so it goes over for a week under the rules. It is really to be hoped that the bill will pass, as it will work great advantages to the new States and give us the opportunity to establish a good Agricultural College in Oregon.

The weather is pleasant again and the avenue is gay with beautiful faces—for this city has many fine looking women. I think there are over the average of handsome faces here. A friend of mine—who remains an old bachelor when there is no use of it—very sarcastically remarks: "that is their best hold." Quite cynical that, but it may be also true.

DECISION IN THE U. S CIRCUIT COURT BY JUDGE DEADY.

The attorney of a party has the exclusive control of the conduct and management of a suit, and neither the party nor his agent or attorney in fact has authority to sign a stipulation for a continuance.

Counsel in a suit is not authorized to represent his client except in the argument or hearing before the court. A printed name of counsel is not his signature.

United States Circuit Court—District of Oregon. | Monday, January 27, 1873.

John Nightingale, Simon G Elliott vs. The Oregon Central Railway Co., et al In Equity.

Motion to set aside order granting continuance.

DEADY, J. This motion was made by plaintiffs' counsel, Mr. E. D. Shattuck, with whom was Mr. W. H. Effinger, on December 13, 1872, to set aside an order theretofore made, continuing the cause until April 25, 1873, upon the ground that the stipulation therefor was signed on behalf of said plaintiffs, without authority.

Time was given to file affidavits for and against the motion until January 22, 1873, when it was argued and submitted. The material facts proven are as follows:

I. That on May 26, 1871, the plaintiffs commenced this suit by David Logan, their solicitor and E. D. Shattuck, their counsel; and that at the end of the complaint which is to print, the names of J. B. Felton and W. H. Patterson, are printed as "of counsel for complainant;" and that neither Felton or Patterson were then or since, attorneys or counsellors of this court; but were, on May 29, 1871, by order of this court, allowed to appear as counsel therein for plaintiffs in this suit.

II. That on November 30, 1872, while the cause was pending upon exceptions to the complaint for impertinence, a stipulation for a continuance until April 25, 1873, theretofore signed, in San Francisco, by said Felton and Patterson, as attorney for plaintiffs, was filed by the attorney for defendants, upon which stipulation, and on motion of said defendant's attorney, the order for continuance was then and there granted, without notice to said Logan or Shattuck.

III. That prior to the commencement of this suit it was agreed between plaintiff Elliott and said Felton, that the latter would furnish the sum of $20,000 to prosecute this suit, and should receive therefor 33⅓ per centum of whatever sum might be recovered therein; and that afterwards and soon after the commencement of this suit, said Elliott, at the special instance and request of said Felton, assigned to him for the use of himself and said Patterson, 48-100 of the cause of suit, in consideration that said F. and P. would furnish the remainder of said $20,000 and give their professional service and attention in the conduct and maintenance of this suit; and that said F. and P. have not furnished the remainder of said $20,000, nor rendered any professional service in and about said suit, since the commencement thereof.

Upon this state of facts the motion to set aside the order must be allowed. Neither Felton or Patterson being attorneys or counsellors of this court, had any authority to sign the stipulation. The order admitting them, as a matter of comity, to appear as counsel in the case, only authorized them to represent the plaintiff before the court in the argument or hearing of the same, and not in the written proceedings or out of court. Nor does the fact that their names are printed on the complaint as "of counsel, for the complainant" affect the matter one way or the other. These printed names are not their signatures. Besides, not being counselors of this court, they were not authorized to sign the complaint as counsel. Again, an attorney who appears only as counsel in a case, is not authorized to sign a stipulation for a continuance, even if he be an attorney and counselor of the court in which the suit is pending. The conduct of a suit, except in a matter arising in the argument or hearing before the court, is exclusively under the control of the attorney.

Counsel for defendants seek to avoid the force of these conclusions, by maintaining that it appears from the facts that F. and P. are interested in the subject matter of the suit and therefore are entitled to control it; and that in any event, having undertaken to carry on and prosecute this suit, they are the attorneys in fact or agents of the plaintiff for that purpose, and therefore had authority to sign the stipulation.

The parties on the record or their attorneys are the only ones which the Court can recognize, as having power to continue or discontinue the suit. Whatever interest F. and P. may have in the event of the suit or the subject matter of it, as between them and the plaintiffs, so far as this motion and the conduct of the suit is concerned, they are strangers to the proceeding.

Upon the second proposition counsel for plaintiffs insist that it appears from the evidence that F. and P. have abandoned their contract with the plaintiffs and refused to perform the same, and therefore they are no longer, if ever, attorneys in fact or agents of the plaintiffs.

From the view I take of the matter it is not necessary to decide this question. Section 35 of the judiciary act (1 Stat., 92) provides that,—

"In all the courts of the United States the parties may plead and manage their own cases personally, or by the assistance of such counsel or attorneys at law, as by the rules of the said courts respectively shall be permitted to manage and conduct causes therein."

When, in this court, a party does not choose to manage his cause personally, as permitted by this section, he can only do so by an attorney thereof. He cannot appoint an agent not an attorney of this court and authorize such agent to represent him in the suit. But when a party makes his choice and selects an attorney of this court to conduct and manage his cause, the attorney stands in his place. Until such attorney is changed or discharged he has the exclusive control of the conduct and management of the suit. He cannot give a release or discharge the cause of action. But he has exclusive control of the remedy, and may continue or discontinue it. Gaillard vs Smart, 6 Cow., 383, Kellogg vs Gilbert, 10 John., 220. His client cannot control him in the due and orderly conduct of the suit. Anon. 1 Wend., 108.

Such being the legal effect of the plaintiff's selecting Messrs. Logan and Shattuck to bring and manage this suit and represent them therein before this court, it follows that Elliott could not authorize F. and P. to sign this stipulation for a continuance or otherwise control the conduct thereof, because he no longer had power to do so himself. If a client cannot control his attorney in the conduct of a suit, he certainly cannot constitute or authorize an agent to do so.

It matters not, then, what the true relation is between the plaintiffs and F. and P., they not being parties to this suit or attorneys therein, had no authority to sign the stipulation for a continuance. The order for continuance, based thereon, is set aside.

W. H. Effinger, for plaintiffs.
Joseph N. Dolph, for defendants.

DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.

EASTERN DATES TO JANUARY 28.

WASHINGTON CITY.

Congressional.

WASHINGTON, Jan 27.—In the Senate, Cragin introduced a bill directing the Postmaster General to make a contract with the Medo-Oriental Company for carrying mails to European ports, and to endorse bonds of said Company to the amount of $33,000,000. Referred.

Stewart offered a resolution directing the Committee on the Pacific railroads, to inquire into the condition of the accounts between the several Pacific railroads and the United States growing out of the provision of an act of 1502 requiring that after the completion of the roads five per cent. of their net earnings shall be annually applied to the payment of bonds and interest until they are paid. Stewart asked immediate consideration of the resolution, but Edmunds objected. The resolution was laid over.

The bill requiring National Banks to restore their capital when impaired, and to amend the National currency law, passed.

In the unfinished business of legislation, the Appropriation Bill was taken up, the question being on the amendment of Morrill, of Maine, as modified, to provide that it shall be the duty of the President to take such steps as may be necessary to recover from the Pacific Railroad Companies such bonds and interest as may be due, and the United States Circuit Courts

A Distorted View of Oregon Corrected.

We find in a paper called the Watchman, published at Bethany, Missouri, a letter from a person whom that paper designates by the affectionate title of "Uncle John Stewart," which contains more distorted and incorrect statements in regard to the soil and resources of Oregon, than we should have supposed it possible to condense into so short a space. We transfer this letter to our columns at length in order that our readers may see what sort of statements go abroad concerning our young State, and also to show such as are curious how distorted may be the mental vision of a man who is still permitted to run at large. Here is the document:

MONMOUTH, Polk County, Oregon, Nov 27, 1872.

Editor Bethany Watchman: After an absence of three months I am again in Monmouth, and am sorry to say that I am not at home, for there is no place here worthy of the name. When we were in Missouri we had a place, and though it was not as fine as some others, we had good land and it was in a good country. Here we have nothing, and never can have. The soil is too poor to raise anything except wheat, and man can't live on bread alone.

Everything is flat in Oregon at this time. Wheat did not yield as well this year as last, and is only worth about half as much as it was last year.

Some people talk about the beauty of Oregon, but I have been unable to see where the "beauty" of a poor country comes in. I have traveled some five or six months since my removal here, and have seen more poor and worthless land in Oregon than I have seen elsewhere in all my life before.

The business of soliciting for the Christian College afforded me the opportunity to learn more of the various dispositions of men than I had known before. I formed many agreeable acquaintances, among whom was old Chris. Taylor, who had lived in Harrison county, Missouri, before Bethany was laid out as a town. He is a true gentleman, and better than that, he is a Christian. I also found John Banton, whose mother, brother and sister lived in Bethany at the time I left that region. Mr. Banton belongs to one of the popular Branch Churches of recent date. Again I renewed the acquaintance of some I had known many years ago in America. Like myself, a number of them are dissatisfied with Oregon. The Lord never intended this country for white people, but had it fitted up for the Indian. He placed a great desert to hold them separate, but the irrepressible Yankee thinks he can manage mundane affairs himself, and so he has moved westward and taken possession of the land.

Our hunt proved an entire failure, but we have not given the idea up altogether. We intend to go where the game is more abundant.

During my stay out my labors were chiefly confined to Lane county, which is as large as one of the Eastern States. It is bounded west by the ocean, east by the Cascade Mountains, north by Linn and Benton counties—the former on the east and the latter on the west side of the Willamet river. This river has three branches in Lane county, the Coast, Middle and McKenzie forks, all of which I have visited. I was within fifteen or twenty miles of the Bohemia gold mines, almost as far out as people can settle. Indeed, I went where I had but little hope of doing good, but my desire was to see as much of the country as possible, and as it was harvest time, the opportunity was afforded for seeing it at its best. My honest opinion is, that after the little surplus wheat is shipped off, there is not enough left in all this valley to load one train of cars a year. But few farmers can raise enough for their own consumption. Of course the land must become poorer all the time, especially when grass and clover cannot be raised to renovate it. I have seen in the States more good grass and hay on two or three miles square than there is in a county here.

But I must close for this time. We are all in usual health. Peace be with you all.

JOHN STEWART.

We have no reason other than the letter itself, to doubt that this person from Bethany in the State of Missouri, sees Oregon in much the light in which he paints it; but in order to give him this credit, we are compelled to credit him also with a degree of mental blindness which ought to shield him from responsibility for any statement he might make.

In the first sentence, this person from Bethany in the State of Missouri, announces that there is no place here worthy the name of a home. It is a well known fact that the people of this State have as comfortable and cozy homes and live as easy, take them "by and large" as those of any other part of the United States, and this remark is especially true of the people in and about the village of Monmouth, many of whom are from Missouri and have here better and handsomer homes than they had there.

The next statement is, that the soil of Oregon is too poor to raise anything but wheat. We had not learned before that poor land was favorable to the production of wheat. We send East wheat, the superior quality of which astonishes the dealers who have been accustomed to handling the shrivelled grains from Missouri farms. We never have a failure of crops, we know no such thing as rust. Midge and weevil are never seen in Oregon. And we challenge the world—and Missouri—to a contest in the matter of fruits and vegetables. The last report of the Agricultural Bureau shows the corn crop of Oregon in 1872 averaged 29 bushels to the acre, and that of Missouri 37. The price in Oregon was 93 cents, that in Missouri 32. The return from an acre of corn in Oregon was therefore $26 97, while that of an acre in Missouri was only $11 84.

The average wheat crop of Oregon was 18.2 bushels, that of Missouri 10.6.

Rye in Oregon 23.2 bushels, worth 73 cents per bushel; in Missouri 16 bushels, worth 71 cents.

Oats in Oregon 28.2 bushels, worth 51 cents per bushel, $14 38; in Missouri 33.7 bushels, worth 23 cents—$7 75.

Potatoes in Oregon, 113 bushels per acre, worth 55 cents; in Missouri, 90 bushels worth 50 cents.

Hay in Oregon, 1.35 tons per acre, worth $17 25 per ton; in Missouri, 1.29 tons worth $9 73 per ton.

And so we might go on through the entire list of articles produced in Oregon, and show that in every single one Oregon leads Missouri. And we might add also that not only in the average crops, but in particular instances of prodigiously great crops, we need not yield the palm to Missouri till we are shown a field of wheat returning 60 bushels to the acre; a meadow that cuts four tons of hay per acre and a potatoe field that produces—well, we would not like to name the limit.

In another column will be found an article from the Baker Democrat, from which other interesting facts in regard to the resources of the State may be obtained.

"Uncle John" has traveled five or six months in Oregon, and says that in that time he has seen more worthless land than he ever saw before in all his life. Very likely. His letter indicates that he has seen more of everything in this six months than in all his previous life.

It would be well for this "party of the name of Stewart" to investigate his subject before he proceeds to the further enlightenment of the good people of Missouri in regard to Oregon.

A writer in the Washington Chronicle says there are now in America over 60,000 miles of railway and that there will be seventy thousand by the end of the present year.

An Apology

A few days since, remarking upon the conduct of the editor of the Bulletin in writing puffs of himself to be inserted in a certain Washington Territory paper, and then copying them from that paper into the Bulletin, we mentioned incidentally his having some time ago written the editorials for a Democratic paper called the Era, published in East Portland, which editorials he would afterwards, through the OREGONIAN which he was then conducting, compliment for their ability while deprecating their politics. We alluded to this matter only as an illustration of the peculiar methods by which some men contrive to puff themselves into notice, and should not have thought of referring to it again had not Mr S. W. Ravely, who was proprietor of the Democrate Era at the time, and who is now business manager of the Bulletin, considered our statement as a reflection upon himself and published a card denying that the present editor of the Bulletin ever wrote an editorial for the Democratic journal. We were probably misinformed in the premises, and if so it is but justice to Mr. Ravely that we make the amende honorable. The only knowledge we had upon the subject was that the present editor of the Bulletin stated to a gentleman of good standing in this city that he wrote the editorials for the Era, adding that he "could beat Taylor any day editing a Democratic paper." We could produce this statement in writing, signed by the gentleman to whom the remark was made, but as the matter would still rest on a question of veracity between the editor of the Bulletin and Mr. Raveley, we accept the card of the latter gentleman as conclusive.

Boston is trying to enlarge her phylacteries so as to bring back the Yankees who have fled into suburban towns to escape city taxes. So perceptible has been this absorption—by Cambridge, Chelsea, Charlestown and other towns, that a bill looking to a speedy and efficient remedy has been introduced into the Massachusetts Legislature. The proposition may appear exceedingly audacious to those not acquainted with Yankee character, being no less than a bill to annex fourteen suburban cities. We "guess" there'll be a yowl from a hundred thousand healthy lungs bawling in healthy unison against this gigantic larceny. Why! it's enough to start the old Revolutionary blood of the entire Bay State—sluggish enough now, heaven knows—coursing through the veins of every Yank on the face of the globe! It was the old tea-spilling scene revived when Boston undertook to absorb Dorchester. The whole State was inflamed. But by the judicious application of some mystic political hasheesh, Dorchester was tranquilized into submission. We shall soon hear the musical tenor of Longfellow joining the rich bass of Dr. Holmes in denunciation of the project which would destroy the individuality of historic Cambridge. Nor will humorous Lowell be silent.

Santo Domingo has again become a source of grief to Democracy. The occasion is furnished by a report that certain prominent merchants of the East are now negotiating for the purchase of that fertile island.

The facts in the case are these; several leading shipping merchants of the East engaged in the South American and Mexican trade, have sent four or five agents to Santo Domingo with instructions to contract with President Baez for the lease of the Peninsula and Bay of Samana, on the same terms as may be found in the Samana Treaty of 1869, namely: the payment of an annual rental of $150,000 gold, the right of unobstructed commerce and navigation being reserved by Baez. Among the list of those engaged in this enterprise, we notice the name of C. K. Garrison, President of the United States and Brazil Steamship Company, and Mr. Stockwell, President of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company. At the same time there are representative men in New York, Philadelphia and Boston who are largely interested in it, so that it becomes what Dr. Howe has named it. "A great commercial enterprise backed by men of wealth and energy," in which the Government has no directive power.

We are indebted to the courtesy of Secretary Chadwick for a copy of the laws passed at the last session of the Legislature and the late decisions of the Supreme Court. The laws and decisions are bound together in a neat volume of about six hundred pages. The printing and paper are far better than have generally come from the office of the State Printer, and the book is altogether a more creditable production than its predecessors. This volume brings the Supreme Court decisions down to the latest printed in any form, and, with the decisions heretofore published in the volumes containing the acts of the Legislature and the First and Second Oregon Reports, enables the legal practioner to possess himself of all the decisions of our highest Court in a convenient form, and without the expense and incumbrance of a mass of nisi prius decisions, such as we find in the book called the Third Oregon Reports.

The New York Herald is authority for the statement that General Schofield's mission to the Sandwich Islands means something more than a mere pleasure trip. Schofield, says the Herald, has the friendship and confidence of the President, who has entrusted grave matters of diplomacy to him. These relate to preventing any undue foreign interference in the affairs of the Islands and to the protection of American interests there. The statement that the General takes the sea voyage for the benefit of his health is supplemented by the significant remark that the State Department avails itself of this opportune occasion to charge him with secret instructions to watch Hawaiian politics closely and co-operate with the American Ministers in giving timely warning to the Department of any foreign influence inimical to our interests.

For many years the University of Pennsylvania has suffered from the charge of issuing bogus medical diplomas. Complaints from European Medical Societies having reached the City Council of Philadelphia, an investigation was ordered recently, which resulted, of course, in the usual whitewashing process. Notwithstanding the explicit denial of the Trustees and Faculty, it is said to be a notorious fact that the statutes of the University confer upon the latter the right to bestow Honorary Degrees in Medicine, in absentia.

The evil complained of may have originated in an abuse of the privilege conferred by the statutes. Certainly the public, and more particularly many sick men, have had grave reason to complain of laxity in administration of the law.

The editor of the Bulletin appears to think everybody else has his habit of writing puffs of himself, and publishing them as letters received from others. In this he is in error. Only those who feel the need of such quackery resort to it. The Bulletin has the field entirely to itself, so far as this peculiar style of advertising is concerned.

The Goat Island agitation in California is not without its appropriate degree of pathos. A "Sufferer" writes to the Alta in reply to the Bulletin's remark that "Goat Island is a bugbear to San Francisco:"

It could as truly add that it has made it so its self constituted guardianship has entailed poverty upon us, and left but misery and what to bread about our fireplaces!

The plaintive wail of this straibitar "householder" (?) may or may not have been begotten after the unique fashion of Persons' birth "But the jingling of the guineas helps the hurt that honor feels."

Seriously, "Sufferer" is only a type of a peculiar race of fools whose existence is tolerated by mistake. The idea that the independent journals of San Francisco are responsible for the "paralysis in real estate speculations," complained of by reason of their opposition to the avarice of Stanford is absurd nonsense. The manly tone of the Bulletin is but the echo of a strong popular sentiment prevailing throughout the State.

An enlightened public policy would dictate the colonization of this class of "sufferers" in the Fiji Islands. We would insure the speedy death of the cannibals, and San Francisco would be rid of a class it can well afford to lose. Thus a double benefit would ensue. We call the attention of the Bulletin to the scheme.

As a consequence of President Grant's recent order forbidding Federal officers holding State offices, we hear of great commotion among the Custom House officials in Louisiana. Many of the latter have entered the Legislature and other departments of State politics, and it is strongly hinted that their presence has not always been welcome to the citizens of that State. By order of the President some have been dismissed from the Government service, while others have resigned.

The Georgia Legislature has elected General Gordon to the United States Senate to succeed Joshua Hill, whose term expires on the 4th of March. It is considered settled that Alexander H. Stephens will be sent to Congress from the Eighth District to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Wright.

A Washington dispatch announces that Hon. James Brooks, Congressman from New York City, has been advised by his physicians to quit work. It would have been greatly to the advantage of his reputation if this advice had been given and obeyed before the Credit Mobilier was invented.

Another victory for the Liberals of the United Kingdom. After a severe contest Professor Huxley, the eminent English scientist, has been elected Lord Rector of Aberdeen University by a majority of 54 votes over his competitor, the Marquis of Huntly.

Woodhull and Claflin and "Col." Blood have again obtained bail and are at large.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, JANUARY 22 1873

TERRIBLE CALAMITY.—Mr G W Brown, an old and well known citizen of Portland was run over by a car yesterday morning a short distance above the lower saw mill of the city and received injuries from which he died soon after The circumstances of this truly deplorable casualty are about as follows The accident occurred about half past 8 o'clock A M A railroad track is laid from the west side depot down to the saw mill so that cars can be backed down to the lumber yard and be loaded with convenience A locomotive attached to two large platform cars was backing down the track quite slowly yesterday towards the mill Some distance above the mill there is a switch The cars were thrown off on the switch and the locomotive detached The cars continued to move on rapidly after the coupling was loosened both from the impetus received from the locomotive and the sharpness of the grade on the switch Mr. Brown thinking to stop the cars before the end of the switch was reached very imprudiously attempted to clamber on the platform at the coupling By some means he missed his footing and fell between the cars Before he could catch himself or make the least effort to get from under the ponderous wheels were on him Both wheels of the car passed over his right thigh where the limb is attached to the body The weight was sufficient to crush the bone of the limb, and reduce the flesh to a mass of jelly. Immediately after the sad occurrence, Mr Brown was picked up and laid on a pile of lumber The shock which the system had sustained and the deadening pain which followed, rendered the helpless victim wholly unconscious within a few moments after the accident A hack was sent for and the insensible form of the fatally injured man was conveyed to his home in the southern portion of the city Several physicians were summoned with all possible haste, but alas, to no purpose The injuries were of a character too serious to even allow the system to rally from the shock Mr Brown never regained consciousness for a moment after the casualty, and expired about half past nine o'clock A M

Deceased was an old pioneer having been a resident of Portland for many years In 1860 he was a member of the Legislature and the year following he owned an interest in and partly controlled the Standard newspaper Some years ago he occupied the position of Superintendent of Common Schools for this county Subsequently he was a candidate for Councilman from the Third Ward Since he became a resident of Portland, Mr Brown has been quite prominently connected with both city and county politics. Mr Brown was a quiet, peaceable and industrious citizen, commanding the respect and confidence of the entire community He was a kind, exemplary husband and father, and an orderly and valued citizen His age was 49 years He leaves a wife, two grown daughters and a little son, all of whom are bowed down in the deepest sorrow by this most afflictive bereavement The accident is peculiarly afflicting to the family, friends and the community at large The sincere sympathies of our citizens are extended to those who are called upon to suffer most by this sad calamity The remains will be buried to-morrow afternoon

LAUNCHED.—The hull of the boat belonging to the Willamette Transportation Company was launched yesterday evening about half past four o'clock from the ways above the upper saw mill of the city The event had been announced to come off at four o'clock, but long before that hour the banks were lined with hordes of ladies and gentlemen who had assembled to witness the launch Everything was in readiness for the launch except the bracing up of the hull, which required but little time A large number of persons mounted the deck of the hull resolving to have the honor of being on board when she "took the water" The hull was launched sidewise, the ways reaching from the farther edge of the boat into the water The top side of the ways were planed off smooth and lubricated with grease On the ways were placed long pieces of timber resting on the grooves which had been greased The hull reposed on these pieces of timber and was held level and in its proper position by means of wedges At the upper ends the two pieces of timber were lashed firmly together by ropes When all was ready the temporary supports on each side of the hull were knocked away and the ropes all severed at the same instant The top timbers on which the hull rested having nothing to prevent them from moving, commenced to slide down the sharp incline carrying the boat. At first the downward movement was very slow, but accelerated by the weight of the hull and the lubricated ways, it increased very rapidly until the water was touched The hull struck the water so violently that those on board were nearly thrown from their feet, but when it had settled it sat very handsomely on the water The model is quite neat, but is evidently fashioned more for freight accommodations than with reference to speed However driven by powerful machinery the craft ought to be as rapid as any boat of the same dimensions and style of model on the river Before the lashings were cut the American colors were hoisted over the new craft, and its folds were flung to the breeze as the hull descended to the river Captain Kellogg took his stand at the bow of the craft and when it started to move he broke a bottle of champagne over the prow and christened the new boat the "Governor Grover" No sooner had the newly named craft entered the water than cheer on cheer rose from those on shore for the manner in which the launch was managed and for the future success of the Governor Grover

RAILROAD ITEMS.—We have before referred to the reported letting by the North Pacific Railroad Company, of the contract for the construction of 300 miles of their line, beginning at some point on the Columbia not far from Umatilla, and running eastward The Kalama Beacon which claims to be posted in regard to the doings of the company, says "As to the reported contract of W S King to construct three hundred miles on the Pacific division this year, nothing official has been communicated since our last report Mr King arrived in San Francisco on the 14th inst., accompanied by F E Canda, the noted R R contractor, they are likely to arrange the details of their business at San Francisco without visiting here at present. Most probably by present arrangement, the officers of the O. S. N Co went to San Francisco a couple of weeks since to confer with Messrs King and Canda on the subject of transportation facilities to the Upper Columbia for railroad material, etc., during the coming season A month's time may probably develop the programme of next spring's railroad campaign on the Pacific Division"

PASSENGERS.—The steamship Oriflamme is sailed for this port yesterday forenoon, having on board the following passengers Capt J C Ainsworth, S G Reed, N Neely, Miss M Connor, Miss C Connor, M Cheron, John Harlow, W D Page, H J Stone, G W Hume, O T Myers, H Foster, Mrs J G Fairfowl and two children, Rev Mother Stanislaus, Sister Eugene, Sister Adolphe, J K Lostorman, J A King Jas Foster, L Nicolin, H Sinnott G Milwain, J B Congle, Mrs F A Taylor, Miss E W Foster, Miss M A Hogue, J Starr, J C Roundtree, Mrs H W Scott and three children, C H Marines, W B Raymond and wife J Dyer and wife

PLENTY OF BUSINESS.—Three weeks have passed, and there has been no quorum at the Common Council, and consequently no business has been transacted It is more than probable that a large amount of unfounded business has accumulated during that time on the Clerk's table The regular meeting will be held this evening, according to the charter, and there will likely be a quorum present This will doubtless be the ardent wish of those whose claims against the city have been suffered to remain on the table without any action.

THE GOVERNOR GROVER.—The steamer Governor Grover which was launched last evening, will probably be finished and in complete running condition by the last of next month Work on the cabin will be prosecuted with all possible vigor until completed The boiler and engines are being built at the Iron works, and will probably be completed in a few weeks When ready to be received on board the hull will be towed down opposite, and the heavy works can be transferred without inconvenience

INSTALLATION.—The officers of Ellison Encampment No 1, I O O F, were installed last evening by A G Walling P C P, as follows, to wit

C W Parrish C P L E Hicks H P P H Stolte, S W J H Lyon, Scribe C Hogele T J S Johnson, J W, H Sundrum I S G H Henry, O S, James Lotan, G, William Bradon W, S J Spray, 2d W, D E Buchanan 3d W, S Harris, 4th W Daniel Rieman, 1st G T, C. R. Hoffman, 2d G. T.

QUITE ILL.—We regret to announce that W S Ladd, Esq, the banker, is now confined to his house with a severe attack of illness

TAKEN THE PLACE.—The splendid steamer Emma Hayward took the place of the Fannie Troup yesterday on the line between Portland and Kalama, temporarily She went on at the usual hour—one o'clock—and will return this morning The Troup is undergoing repairs at the wharf and will be in complete readiness to resume the line to day

IN TWO WEEKS.—Carpenters are busily engaged at present in putting up the new seats and desks at the Central School House The arrival of these desks were noticed a few days since on the last steamer The Directors are pressing the work to progress as rapidly as possible so that the new building will be ready for occupancy in about two weeks

NOT HEARD FROM.—No tidings whatever have been received of the bark Edward Joy, which sailed some months ago from the Sound for Hong Kong There have been no advices received from that port since the sailing and consequently nothing has been heard of the bark Intelligence may be anticipated in a few days

INSTITUTED.—An Encampment of the Champions of the Red Cross was instituted at the Dalles on Sunday last by W Winnie D D G The following is the list of officers R D Flick C L Myers J C, W Schevers R S, R W Crandall L S M A Starr I W Coats C H A Jackson, O G

TWENTY DAYS EACH.—The three persons who made themselves so officious in meddling with officer Hudson while he was making an arrest on Monday, were arraigned in the Police Court yesterday morning After an examination of the case, the Court sentenced each to the city jail for the period of twenty days

ANOTHER BOAT.—We learn that it is the present intention of the Williamette Transportation Company, to put on the ways another boat similar in size and model to the hull of the one which was launched yesterday It will be completed as soon as possible, and take whatever line assigned it

OTHER BUILDINGS.—There are in contemplation during the present season, a number of brick buildings in this city In the course of a few weeks orders for plans and specifications will be placed in the hands of architects which will be finished in time for the commencement of work in the spring

GAS HOLDER SHIPPED.—The iron material of which the gas holder for the Portland Gas Company is to be constructed was shipped yesterday on the bark Helanothan which sailed for Portland On the arrival of the material workmen will be employed at once to put the plates together in sections

RELEASED.—Adam Walski, who was arrested near Vancouver, on Sunday last, charged with the murder of Charles Nelson, was, after a preliminary examination before Justice Smith of that place, discharged from custody, the evidence not being sufficient to implicate him in the murder

UNMENTIONABLES.—Officer O Neil has a quantity of ladies' unmentionables, which he found a few nights since on the flat below the city No clue was obtained as to the manner in which they came to be placed in that locality The strong probabilities are that those clothes were stolen

TO BE REMOVED TO G STREET.—The old frame building known to old residents as "Hogan's Stable," which has been used as a carriage house by the Oregon Transfer Company, will be moved to G street, where it will be placed in position for the use of the above company

FIRE ALARM.—About ten o'clock last evening an alarm of fire was sounded from the city bell on the Odd Fellows' Hall The Department promptly responded, but their services were not brought into requisition, as the alarm proved false

PLANS FINISHED.—The plans for the new brick building to be erected by C M. Carter the present season, have been completed by Mr Burton Work will begin on the new building at once and prosecuted to completion

CALLING TO INSPECT.—The fire alarm box at the engine house of Multnomah No 2, is still on exhibition, and is visited by crowds of curious persons who desire to observe its practical operations

FOR TEN DAYS.—A fellow named Irving for making a shameless exposure of his person, was sentenced in the Police Court yesterday morning to ten days in the city jail

ONLY VESSEL.—The English bark Barrac ita is the only vessel now in port receiving cargo She will soon be ready to proceed down the river

NOT YET GONE.—The ships Victoria Nyanza and Wallington are still detained at Astoria on the account of rough weather off the bar

CROSSED THE BAR.—The brig Orient passed over the bar, bound for San Francisco, on last Monday, with a cargo of railroad iron

PERSONAL

Col Chris Taylor of Dayton, gave us the pleasure of a call last evening The Colonel comes on business to the city He reports everything prosperous and happy in Yamhill

We had the pleasure of receiving, yesterday, a call from L B Hopkinson, Esq, traveling agent of the San Francisco Chronicle, who is visiting this region looking after the interests of the journal he represents

We acknowledge a call from Mr Stewart Hanna, one of the leading farmers of Yamhill county, who is now on a business visit to the city. Mr Hanna is among the old pioneer farmers of the State, and owns one of the finest farms in Yamhill county.

By the steamer Oriflamme, which sailed yesterday for this port a number of our capitalist citizens will arrive Among the passenger list we observe the names of Capt J C Ainsworth, S G Reed, Hon J B Congle, E Milwain, and several others

AMUSEMENTS.

Benefit ball to Simon Schmeer at Armory Hall this evening

The ladies of the Congregational Church will hold a festival in the school room on Friday evening All who attend will be amply repaid for the time spent

Manager Woidron must have felt highly gratified when he cast his eyes over the auditorium of the theater last evening It was a perfect jam The plays produced were just suited to the occasion and seemed to please the vast audience present We were pleased to observe that the theater going public turn out so well and we trust equally as large audiences will be present at each succeeding performance this week A continuance of the season will be the result Otherwise the season will close on Saturday night This evening "The Fireman" and "Iron Chest" together with an interlude will be presented—certainly an attractive bill. On Thursday Mr J R. Ladd the attentive treasurer will be the recipient of a benefit A large house is promised him

BUSINESS NOTICES

Messrs. Welch & Morgan, who have been for many years established in this city, are now located in new and more commodious quarters at the corner of Yamhill and Front streets Their store is crowded with saddlery and harness, which they offer at very low rates

CARD FROM CORPORAL BLOOD

To the Editor of The Oregonian

My Dear Sir, To day I read the highly interesting letter from Capt Kelly of the "army" I am not a warrior—although once an honorary member of the Home Guard, but fortunately I resigned before Lee invaded Pennsylvania—therefore I would like to be enlightened by some of the fighting editors of the Oregonian regarding the tactics of our Army of the Lost River Captain Kelly says the fog was so thick that Lieut Perry was in much danger of being shot by his own troops, that the fog "commenced in the morning and lasted all day;" that while our troops were fighting "over a circle of five miles in diameter" seventy Indians were counted in one bunch Whew! Shades of Munchausen, or ghost of truthful Jennie Baker! A fog so thick that an officer had hard work to form his "Echelon" without being killed by his own men, by not recognizing him, and yet seventy in one bunch counted! How far, may I ask could seventy be counted, even on a fair day? Not more, certainly, than two or even three blocks away Then in the name of Mars how far will our improved breech loaders shoot? Seventy in one bunch! and none killed! Whew! what shots our men are! Seventy Indians were counted, and not a solitary corpse to reward us Dash away such arms that cannot carry bullets as far as one can count seventy with accuracy Withdraw the men who cannot hit a "bunch of seventy" Get a mammoth squirt gun, some Salem whisky (sold at Legislative times) and somebody if there are "seventy in a bunch" will get hurt, or else lose ink wasted, or shorter yarns told

Yours, &c, CORPORAL BLOOD,
Home Guard

Eastern Oregon

The commercial interests of Eastern Oregon are of an agricultural nature, and depend principally upon the industry of its people The soil of its valleys is composed of rich alluvial washed from the adjacent mountains where vast quantities of decayed vegetation collect This, of course, renders the valleys prolific in exuberant cereal productions The quantity of grain raised per acre is astonishing In Grand Ronde (we give this because it is the only statistic matter we have) the wheat crop generally averages from 30 to 50 bushels per acre, barley and oats 100 bushels per acre There are about 30,000 acres under cultivation The amount of grain raised in the valley in the year 1871, was as follows: Wheat, 250,000 bushels, oats, 200,000 bushels, barley, 150,000 In this exhibit we only mention one of the valleys of Eastern Oregon The grain produced in our country constitutes one of its chief articles of traffic, yet, comparatively speaking, little or no trade has been had It is very frequent that wheat is quoted at Portland, San Francisco and other commercial emporiums, at $1 per bushel, while here it commands 60 cents The cost of transportation far exceeds the value of grain The grain crop of 1872 was much less than that of 1871, owing to the fact that a large crop would over supply the market, therefore, farmers, instead of putting in vast quantities of grain, raised but little more than what was sufficient for home consumption This will account for the cost of oats and barley being higher at times. The wheat that is raised in the valley is here converted into flour, hence more wheat is raised than any other grain We have reference here to Grand Ronde where there are five or six flouring mills These mills generally have plenty to do, and turn out vast quantities of excellent flour, which find ready sale in the adjacent mines, Idaho and in other markets Grain, though immense quantities may be raised, is not the only production which is to constitute an article of exportation, wool, fruit, and timber may be mentioned in connection. It has already been shown that sheep will do as well in Eastern Oregon as in any country There will, no doubt, be woolen manufactories established in course of time, this will be governed by the growth of the country Fruit in small quantities is raised in Eastern Oregon, and from the success that has followed its first cultivation, we judge that it will ere long receive the special attention of our farmers The fruit trees that have been transplanted are now estimated, and considerable fruit will be obtained from them the coming year Timber may not be regarded as an article of traffic, and in the early history of a country it is not, but we are contemplating the future The Blue Mountains are covered with immense forests of fir, pine and hemlock, which, in coming years, will be of great value in constructing railroads and building purposes When a railroad shall have been constructed through these mountains the timber therein (which is of the best quality) will be shipped eastward This is no chimerical idea but is deduced from reason

We have now mentioned some of the natural productions of Eastern Oregon In so doing we have omitted many articles of importance which will be sources of wealth All we want is cheap transportation, and then will our commerce flourish with increasing vigor pouring into the laps of our industrious farmers and energetic men untold riches "Coming events cast their shadow before," and disclose a glorious future for Eastern Oregon.—Correspondence Redrock Democrat

Prostration Practice

Luckily for the sick the idea that it is necessary to reduce their bodily strength in order to cure them, is fast dying out Modern science recognizes the fact that disease is of itself more than sufficiently depressing to body and mind and does not need to be assisted in its inroads upon the vital energy of the system by violent purgations and debilitating mixtures Prostration is, in short "played out," and the practitioners who still cling to it are so few, and far between that they cannot, like their predecessors of the same fatal school who flourished half a century ago, fill the graveyards with their victims The introduction of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters in 1852 was the heaviest blow that the old practice of depletion had ever received, and from that time to the present as the celebrity of the great vegetable invigorant has increased, the purging, blistering, bleeding, water-pump practice has declined The effect of this famous preventive and remedy is to strengthen build up, regulate and tranquilize, not to weaken, break down and violently disturb the system It is a tonic, alterative and nervine, with a pure stimulant as its propelling and distributing agent This stimulant diffuses the curative and self sustaining elements of the medicine through the whole organization, and brings them into contact with the sources of disease. Hence its curse of indigestion, constipation, bilious complaints nervousness languor, debility, low spirits, malarious disorders &c are complete and thorough and as a protection against the ailments caused or aggravated by cold and damp it has no equal

A Racy Reminiscence.

The following racy bit of doggerel, says the Spirit of the Times, was written some eighteen years ago by Col (then Lieut.) Geo. H Derby, better known as John Phœnix

Among them that came up to speculate in stock and supplies,
Who a fellow named Stewart, a man of enterprise,
He bought him a switch tailed sorrel, two years old which had a white face,
And hankered all Portland, O T, for a three hundred yard race

That was a man bred a horse, which he thought her pretty fair
Tho' he generally knowed as Miller with the easiest dollar mare,
He'd bet any time, he said, of doing anything so cool,
But he took up Mr Stewart for two hundred dollars cash

So every cent was borrowed we bet on Millard's horse;
And that was the speckulating Stewart, with his hand upon his leg,
And two men following with a tin pail full of dollars and a champagne basket full of script

Well, they measured off the ground and the flag was got a start,
And camp rushing down right pretty, about four feet apart;
And the Millard mare had it all her own way, as you'd say good,
Till just as they got to the end of the track that are horral shot two feet ahead

After we seen that, that are was a most surprising din
And remarks like this 'are followed "Dog my ever eatin' skin,"
"I'll be died darned, and dog-oned, and ding blamed, by Pike,"
And that was such awful howling, and swearing, and dancing, that many old people said they had never seen the like

And that are speckulatin' Stewart, he made motions ways,
He packed the money in a hand cart, and didn't care a cuss;
And sweetly smiling, pulled it off, as though he didn't mind the hoss;
And since that, we hain't paid no taxes, nor bought nothing, nor sold nothing, for I do suppose that in all Portland, O. T., there ain't a single red cent left.

Congressional Morality.

Whether it may be called instinct, or whether a conscious sense of self-preservation, it was certainly a "defensive measure on the part of the Committee of Congress, appointed to look into any matter connected with the building of the Union Pacific Railroad, to close its doors when it began the investigation. It is an open secret, known of all men who know anything of the subject, that that gigantic enterprise cost tens of millions more than it ought to have cost, and that any inquiry into its affairs would probably reveal some facts not creditable, which, if tried by the rules of strict morality, would not stand the test. But when during the heat of the late Presidential canvass the charge was made on more ex-parte and interested testimony that certain men had been bribed by a gift of Credit Mobilier stock, the recklessness and heinousness of the charge consisted in this, that it alone was assumed as proof against men whose long public career especially entitled them to be considered innocent till they were proved to be guilty, even if that were not the maxim of all criminal law. Such an act was none the less unpardonable because party passion was its motive, and it would be in no degree less reprehensible and offensive even if the charge should subsequently turn out to be true in some degree as against some persons.

Mr. Blaine, in insisting that the accusation should be thoroughly sifted, did precisely what his own honor and the public morality demanded, and he has fully established his own innocence. That others were not so anxious for personal justification, or not so careless as to whether Congressional morality could bear examination, seems plain enough from the fact that publicity was in any investigation, if possible, to be avoided. The determination to make it secret was in itself suspicious and a blunder, inasmuch as it aroused the belief that there was something to conceal. The revelations made on the removal of secrecy have only confirmed the belief.

We doubt if any fair-minded man is convinced that anybody was absolutely bribed to any special legislative action by a gift or a cheap purchase of Credit Mobilier stock. The general impression made, probably, is that while members—with perhaps one exception—did not mean absolutely to do anything wrong, they were not careful enough or scrupulous enough to avoid the appearance of evil or the possibility of being placed in a position where temptation would be out of the question. The estimate of the average Congressman is not enhanced by such a judgment. He is shown to be not only not above the average of other men, but a good deal below it. It is not to be wondered at that Congress dreaded such a verdict. In all business communities there is sense of honor which no man can afford to violate, as, for instance, the common practice among merchants of loaning money for brief periods without other promise than a mutual understanding. A breach of trust in such a case is simply ruin to commercial reputation. There ought to be at least that much faith in legislators—a faith that he is true under all temptations to his public duty over his private interests. A merchant who lends his neighbor his check for $10,000 for a day or two without any other security than custom, knows that he may trust implicitly to the other's sense of commercial honor. The legislator who is not equally sensitive to the law of legislative honor is rather under than above the average man. If he is as scrupulous as he should be, he is careful never to put himself in a position where there can by any possibility be any conflict between his private interest and his public duty.

We are quite willing to believe that members supposed they had done with all legislation upon the affairs of the Union Pacific Road, but as their position enabled them to know that there was a "good thing" in the Credit Mobilier stock, they availed themselves of that knowledge to get a share in it. It was precisely at this point where correct judgment and a keen sense of legislative honor were needed. There were gentlemen who said virtually: "No; I cannot touch this thing, because my legislative duty has been and may be again involved in it, and my private interests must not conflict with my public duty." There were others who said: "Yes; I see no harm in taking share in a good thing that comes in my way, because, probably, it will not come before me again in my legislative capacity." That the first were right nobody will question. The second were so far from even justifying their own casuistry that they relinquished their interest in the stock of the company the moment they found that publicity was to be given to its affairs by a lawsuit. Doubtless there are men who will say they would have been fools had they not "gone in" for the "good thing" when they had a chance, but who will also say they did wisely to get out of it when the transaction was likely to become public. And this is a good measure of its morality.

We cannot and we ought not to blind our eyes to the fact that the investigation reveals a low state of the legislative sense of right and wrong. True, it is nothing new; we knew before that there were "rings" in legislatures and in Congress, that the public interest was sacrificed to private interests, that men got themselves placed in positions of public trust from purely selfish motives, that every sort of subterfuge is resorted to in order to cover up the acts of such men, who use the knowledge and the power they gain in public office to subserve their own private interests. But we have had no more striking instance of how subtle this poison of corruption is, of how it may taint the acts of the most virtuous of public men if once they permit themselves to swerve one jot or tittle from the severest scruples by which all their public acts should be guarded and guided. We are not, for our part, sanguine of any sudden reform, nor have we much respect for any spasmodic manifestations of public virtue; but we nevertheless hope that some of the men whom this Credit Mobilier investigation has brought into disagreeable prominence, will be made to feel that a higher sense of legislative morality is demanded than they seem to have conceived of, and that they must suffer the penalty of those who undervalue, in their own conduct, the general estimate of public virtue.—N. Y. Post.

The quality of available funds for investment in our local market is not large, and yet there seems to be a feeling of greater ease than has prevailed for some time. Regular customers of our city banks find that private paper is cheerfully taken at current rates while loans on the street are obtained more readily. Prudent measures on the part of our principal business men have prevented any general serious embarrassments, notwithstanding the prevalent stringency. These men had the foresight to discern the consequence of long credit to their customers, and though they are in some instances likely to carry over pretty large quantities of their winter stock, the goods are of more value than unsettled bills.

Our Relations with Hawaii

It is a question of much importance to the people of this coast who shall obtain control of the business of the Sandwich Islands in the present transition state through which those islands are passing. It is asserted that much the larger part of the business of the Hawaiian Islands is transacted with the United States. The imports into Honolulu from the U. S. are almost twice as large as from all other countries. The American tonnage which enters Hawaiian ports is nearly three times as much as the English. During 1871 twenty-six American whaling vessels entered at Honolulu, and but two British. It will be seen by these statements that our commercial interests with those islands are much more considerable than those of any other nation. Naturally our Government will desire to foster them, and to prevent them of any other nation from obtaining such ascendency.

Ship Building on the Sound.

The Seattle Intelligencer has some very sensible suggestions on the question of the establishment of an industry which is yet destined to be one of great importance to the North Pacific coast, namely, the building of ships. The paper referred to says: There is now no reason why that important industry should not be successfully carried on on Puget Sound. Heretofore there have been discouragements in the way of such an undertaking, notwithstanding it had well been determined that vessels could be built and equipped on Puget Sound cheaper than anywhere else in the Union. This was caused by the decline of American shipping interests, and the idea which for a time prevailed that wooden vessels could be entirely superseded by iron. The increased demand for shipping which has lately been occasioned by the necessities of commerce, and the additional fact that iron is being considered after a fair trial as inferior, as far as safety and service is concerned, to wooden hulls, have effectually disposed of those discouragements, and a new impetus has therefore been given to the construction of wooden sailing vessels elsewhere in the United States. This being the case, we cannot perceive why that industry might not be at once commenced. We have every facility right at hand. Our advantages for a shipyard are unsurpassed. We have several varieties of timber, which have been demonstrated to be superior for ship building purposes; our facilities for procuring ship knees and the best spars, are perfect; coal and iron are both at hand; pitch and resin are cheaply procured; lumber and supplies of all kinds are obtained at the most reasonable rates, and we have already a large number of competent marine architects and shipwrights right in our midst who could be thus most profitably engaged.

These great advantages will be availed of by capitalists in the course of time, but it may be years before they are led to do so. Therefore, the times now being propitious for engaging in such an undertaking, we would suggest, to the absence of men of means who would engage in the business, that the shipwrights in this city and from other portions of the Sound form a co-operative association, and their own employers—and engage at once in the construction of such suitable sized vessels as will command ready purchasers.

Wheat Quotations.

We are at a loss to determine just what is intended by the following editorial note clipped from the columns of the Oregon Statesman, as the editor of that paper has a knowledge of the condition in which a reporter of a paper here is placed, as well as a general knowledge of all the circumstances connected with the market reviews and the prices which have ruled heretofore both at San Francisco and Liverpool, and knows that any attempt on the part of a reporter here to "write the quotations down," would be folly and nothing more. Reporters here have nothing to do with Liverpool and San Francisco quotations except to insert them in their daily reviews as they are received by telegraph. The Statesman says:

"Notwithstanding the Liverpool market for wheat stands firm at figures nearly or quite as high as any that have ruled during the season, the San Francisco and Portland reporters are engaged in writing the quotations down."

Now, it is a matter of ease to determine whether reporters here have "written down" the telegraph quotations, and we cannot think the Statesman intends any meaning of that sort in the above. As to "writing down" our local quotations, we are quite certain that such a thing has not been done in our own case, nor do we believe it is true as to the other dailies in Portland. If the Statesman had pointed out an instance where parties had purchased and paid a material advance on the quotations as given in our paper, we could have seen the reasonableness of the charge which it makes, but in the absence of any evidence of that or any other nature, we are at a loss as to the motive which prompted the assertion. On the whole, we are much inclined to the opinion that the editor of the Statesman did not write the above, as he ought to know that the intimation it contains is not founded in fact.

Home Produce Market.

Business under this head has been quite dull during the past few days, owing principally to the fact of a very limited demand for most commodities except for home consumption. This is true of almost all the products of our State the present season, save Wool and Wheat. Our exporting business has been comparatively small since last fall, if we except the staples last named. The low prices abroad for almost everything else that we produce, have precluded extensive shipments. As an instance of this, we note the fact that Butter, Eggs, Lard, Bacon and Apples, with perhaps other of our products which have before been often sent to San Francisco with profit to shippers, are now very nearly or quite as low in price and dull of sale there as here.

WHEAT—With no great amount of excitement in the market, we note the continued arrival of considerable quantities, some of which is for sale, while most is consigned to exporter, having been bought by their agents in the interior, and is being stored here to await vessels coming. It is estimated that nearly half the last year's crop has been sold, leaving yet in hands of the producers a surplus of about 15,000,000 bushels. Could all of this be got out at the price not of 60 cents per bushel, it would add to the circulation of the State the sum of $750,000, which amount it is claimed will yet be disbursed for Wheat in the State before the next harvest. We hardly think that the quantity of grain, however, is as large as represented. If it be, there is but little prospect that much of it will not be carried over. From present information we believe that half a million dollars will purchase sufficient to load all the vessels likely to be here before harvest. Our market to-day is unchanged from yesterday's condition, and we continue to quote $1 55 per cental as the ruling offer.

FLOUR—There is better demand, comparatively, for shipment to San Francisco, reports from that market for a week p at indicating that a large supply is on hand there and sales are effected with difficulty. Our market is firm at the figures we last gave.

OATS—The shipments from this port the present season have amounted to about 175,000 bushels, and prices have been uniformly steady. Our market is moderately well supplied at 90@92½ cents per bushel.

BRAN—The supply on hand is scarcely adequate to the demand and prices are tending upward. The buying price is for Bran, $16; Shorts, $27 50; Middlings, $30, per ton. Jobbers hold at $19, $30@32 50. The late decline in Wheat and the near approach of spring, with the present mild weather, it is thought, may prevent further advance.

BARLEY—There is more offering and quotations are nominally given at $1 40@1 60 per cental

POTATOES—The only demand is for home consumption, and with a large surplus producers find trade very dull. We quote at 50@55 cents per bushel

BUTTER—Market still stocked, choice firm at former quotations, common very dull and low Cheese unchanged, Oregon 16@17 cents per pound

EGGS—Prices appear a little better, owing to decline in receipts. We quote buyers rates at 22½@25c.

BACON—Of qualities of country cured the market is well supplied and prices are not very firm, though no material decline is noted.

APPLES—A fair supply for local consumption is received, and but a light demand for shipping exists, there being fewer buyers in the market for the latter purpose than usual. From wagons our retail grocers purchase at 45@50 per box, boxes not included, in boxes prepared for shipment choice lots command 75 cents, or an advance per box.

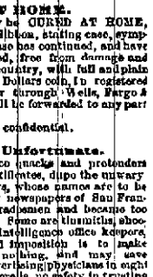
TO THE UNFORTUNATE.
NEW REMEDIES, NEW REMEDIES
Dr. Gibbon's Dispensary,
623 KEARNEY STREET, NEAR COMMERCIAL, San Francisco. Established in 1854, for the treatment of Sexual and Seminal Diseases, such as Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Stricture, Syphilis in all its forms, Seminal Weakness, Impotency, etc. Skin Diseases of years standing) and Ulcerated Legs successfully treated.


DR. GIBBON has the pleasure of announcing that he has returned from visiting the principal Hospitals of Europe, and has resumed practice at his Dispensary, 623 Kearny street, corner of Commercial, San Francisco, where his old patients and those requiring his services may find him.
The Doctor has spared neither time nor money in seeking out new remedies, and has returned with increased facilities for the alleviation of human suffering.
Horrible Diseases.
How many thousands of persons, both male and female, are there who are suffering out a miserable existence from the effects of secret indulgences, or from virus absorbed into the system! Look at the pale, sickly cheek, tell and disfigured faces and their broken-down constitutions, disqualifying them for the happiness of marriage or the enjoyment of life. In the horrid situation thousands suffer until death closes the scene. Let parents, guardians, friends, attend to the cases of those who are suffering with the awful, horrible, life-destroying maladies—see that they are cured for and cured before it be too late. Send them immediately to DR. GIBBON, a physician who has made private diseases his special study for years, and who is certain to cure the most inveterate case, without mercury or any injurious drugs. It is important to those who are afflicted, or to those who are interested in the welfare of their friends, to be careful of the many pretended doctors who infest all cities, publishing their skill in curing all diseases in a few days, imposing upon the public by using the names of eminent physicians from Europe, and by base cheat. Be therefore careful and make strict inquiry, or you may fall into the hands of those charlatans.
Seminal Weakness.
Seminal Emissions, the consequence of self-abuse. This solitary vice, or depraved sexual indulgence, is practiced by fifty youth of both sexes to an almost unlimited extent, producing with unerring certainty, the following train of morbid symptoms, unless combatted by scientific medical measures, viz: Sallow countenance, dark spots under the eyes, pain in the head, ringing in the ears, noise like the rustling of leaves and rattling of chariots, sometimes double vision, weakness of the limbs, confused vision, blunted intellect, loss of confidence, diffidence in approaching strangers, a dislike to form new acquaintances, disposition to shun society, loss of memory, hectic fl
